

In today's competitive market, companies find it necessary to invest in employees with high levels of skills, knowledge, and commitment.

In the Learn A Living program:

You can complete all the requirements for your high school diploma and earn an Associate of Science degree in Business Administration and Management.

You will be evaluated for your skills and aptitudes which will help us define a Learning and Development Plan customized to you. This plan will be designed for you to learn the skills and knowledge necessary for a designated career field.

You will potentially be offered an internship in your selected field so that you can learn about the career while you are completing your high school diploma and Associate of Science degree.

Once you successfully complete your studies, a company from your career field will interview you for a possible position with that company.

Toussaint L'Ouverture High School and Redding College will:

Provide a learning environment at the High School to complete the courses necessary for your high school diploma and Associate of Science degree.

Upon successful completion of your studies, we will grant you a high school diploma and grant you an Associate of Science degree in Business Administration and Management.

Redding College will match you with a career field and potentially a business to be your industry partner.

To qualify for the Learn A Living program:

If you do not have a high school diploma and are not yet 21 years old, you can qualify for this program.

Contact the high school or the Learn A Living program, or fill out the information on the back of this brochure to find out the details and how to get started.

Cost:

If you meet the qualifications you are entitled to participate in this program at no cost. Also, all textbooks are free as well.
